Concept Note

Administrative Quality Improvement Programme (AQIP)

Administration is bureaucratic procedure involving file processing by a huge hierarchy of office staff and a cumbersome and time consuming method of decision making. Justice delayed is justice undone. In the case of administration in higher education institutions delay upsets quality as well. Computer automation is prescribed as the solution for the delay, but delay persists even after automation. It is not technology that ensures administrative justice, but justice driven intervention from above and quick file processing with clarity of rules and definiteness of precedents from below. If we computerize this administration acquires quality. Administration in higher education institutions should be driven by academic passions and values. The AQIP workshop seeks to provide methods and insights of the advanced science of higher education administration ensuring quality.
